Plot

The film opens with a montage of single mothers struggling to find dates. Frustrated with the lack of options available to them, two friends, Ben (Adam Scott) and Jeremy (Paul Rudd), decide to create a website to help single mothers find dates. They call the website "Mama Boy Nerds" and begin to market it to single mothers across the country.

The website quickly becomes a success and Ben and Jeremy are soon overwhelmed with requests from single mothers. They decide to hire a third friend, Sarah (Elizabeth Banks), to help them manage the website. Together, the three friends work to help single mothers find dates and build relationships.

The film follows Ben, Jeremy, and Sarah as they navigate the ups and downs of running Mama Boy Nerds. They face challenges such as finding suitable matches for single mothers, dealing with the demands of their clients, and balancing their personal lives with their work. However, they are determined to make Mama Boy Nerds a success and to help as many single mothers as possible.
