A Century of Poetic Excellence

Poetry Magazine has been publishing some of the world's best poetry for over a century. Founded in 1912, the magazine has published poems by some of the most famous and influential poets of the 20th and 21st centuries, including T.S. Eliot, Sylvia Plath, Robert Frost, W.H. Auden, and Elizabeth Bishop. The magazine has also published the work of many lesser-known poets, giving them a platform to share their work with the world.

One Hundred Poems, One Hundred Years of Poetry Magazine is a testament to the magazine's commitment to publishing excellent poetry. The poems in this anthology are a diverse and representative sample of the work that has appeared in Poetry Magazine over the years. They range from traditional sonnets to free verse poems, from poems about love and loss to poems about social justice and the human condition. Whatever your taste in poetry, you're sure to find something to enjoy in this anthology.

Beautiful Illustrations and Insightful Commentary

In addition to the poems themselves, One Hundred Poems, One Hundred Years of Poetry Magazine also features beautiful illustrations and insightful commentary. The illustrations, by renowned artist Maira Kalman, bring the poems to life and add a layer of visual interest to the book. The commentary, by Poetry Magazine editor Don Share, provides context for the poems and helps readers to understand their significance.

A Must-Have for Poetry Lovers

One Hundred Poems, One Hundred Years of Poetry Magazine is a must-have for any poetry lover. It is a beautiful and comprehensive collection of some of the best poetry of the past century. The poems are diverse and representative, the illustrations are beautiful, and the commentary is insightful. This book is sure to be a treasured addition to your library.
